

PENNSYLVANIA'S WORKERS BILL OF RIGHTS

Every worker has the right to a voice at work. Advancing workers' rights must include strengthening and expanding access to collective bargaining, the pursuit of fair consideration for our time and our labor, and protections for safety and health on the job.

Employers who violate the rights of workers should not be rewarded for offensive labor practices, instead, workers should be recognized as stakeholders in their own right. With these principles in mind, the Pennsylvania AFL-CIO, representing 700,000 union members, has joined with union champions in the state legislature to proactively expand worker dignity in our Commonwealth.
